Backers abandon plans for paper plant

■ Paper plant backers will try to sell the permits and rights they have earned to another industrial project

By Steve Marschke

An official for MacMillan Bloedel, Ltd., of Canada, announced yesterday that the company has officially withdrawn its plans to build a large newspaper recycling plant on over 100 acres in West Sacramento's Southport area.

"We're going to abandon our West Sacramento recycling facility," said Alan Stubbs, a corporate vice president for the company. "This was a joint venture between us and our German partner (Haindl Papier). The presidents of both those organizations looked at the problems, particularly the return on investment, and the long-range forecast wasn't strong enough to justify an expense."

Stubbs added that even though paper prices have been going up -- one of the reasons a newspaper recycling plant might be profitable -- other economic factors made the plant's viability less sure.

Although the plant has hit a snag with the issue of how to treat its millions of gallons per day of liquid waste, Stubbs said that this environmental question wasn't involved in the two companies' decision to pull the plug.

Plans for the facility were unveiled about five years ago, after a city ballot battle which allowed industrial zoning in the 670-acre Southport Industrial Park. City officials, local business leaders and some state environmental groups supported the originally proposed $1.5 billion plant. Some environmental groups opposed it, based partly on their view of the Canadian partner's timber harvesting practices and on the plant's impact on local air and water.

A lawsuit brought by the Sacramento Valley Toxics Campaign resulted in a negotiated settlement, dropping the size of the proposed plant by a third.

Local residents were split on their opinion of the plant, but the proposal won permits from the city and regional regulators. The plan stalled, however, on the question of how to deal with the sewage issue. A development agreement between the project and the city of West Sacramento called for a new sewage treatment plant to be built as one possibility for handling the project's wastes. But environmentalists and water districts who used Sacramento River water downstream expressed deep concern about toxics such as mercury as well as salts and thermal pollution which the paper plant would add to the Delta.

Stubbs said his company was examining the possibility of recycling the plant's use of water and removing toxic wastes on site -- a "closed loop" system he estimated at costing an additional $30 million to the project's billion dollar cost.

He had told the News-Ledger several months ago that this was untried technology, but said yesterday that the sewage question was not a part of his company's decision to pull out of West Sacramento.

Frank Ramos, a partner in the Southport Industrial Park, said he was disappointed at the

THIS PAPER RECYCLING PLANT in Dublin, Georgia, was toured several years ago by a delegation of West Sacramento civic leaders and a reporter from the News-Ledger, as West Sacramento pondered approval of a similar newspaper recycling plant in the Southport Industrial Park. The delegation reported that the Georgia plant was a clean operation that lacked the notorious sulfur-odor of pulp paper mills. In contrast to the Southport Industrial Park setting, however, the Georgia plant was located in a rural setting and treated its own liquid wastes.

The plant is located to the left, just on the near side of the deep water shipping channel. Grain silos for the Port of Sacramento and Farmers' Rice Cooperative are located to the right on the far side of the channel, and the downtown Sacramento skyline is in the right-side background. Policeman & motorist struggle for gun, driver is injured by gunshots

A woman stopped by West Sacramento police was injured by several gunshots after allegedly struggling with an officer and firing several rounds from his gun.

The woman, Trina Fay Lefevre (also known as Trina Brown), 29, of Sacramento, was arrested after being treated and released for wounds to her abdomen and thigh.

Sgt. Mike Purdum of the West Sacramento Police Department said Officer Walt Abel had followed her up the Jefferson Blvd. westbound onramp onto U.S. 50 to stop her vehicle for a traffic violation.

"She refused to be arrested," said Purdum. "A struggle took place. She tried to get away."

A police report said she attempted to shoot the officer with the gun, but Purdum said "I don't think we can determine that right now either way."

Brown was wanted after several Sacramento warrants, said a police press release.

She will be chares with taking a firearm from a police officer, assault on a police officer and the use of a firearm in commission of a felony, the press release added.

Following the shooting, the police officer involved was placed on routine administrative leave pending an investigation.

Man found in Yolo County pond after escape from low security jail facility

A jail escapee was caught Thursday night in a Yolo County pond, several hours after escaping from the Leinberger Minimum Security Jail in Woodland.

Jose Sabino Almendares, 22, allegedly hopped the perimeter chain link fence around 7:30 a.m. Thursday and was spotted by a farmer -- a volunteer member of the Elkhorn Fire District -- who had heard an all points bulletin for the suspect.

Almendares was then chased by a search and rescue unit before fleeing into a wooded wildlife refuge near the Elkhorn boat ramp. West Sacramento police and a K-9 unit joined a CHP helicopter and sheriff's department ground units in looking for him.

At about 11:25 a.m., the helicopter spotted the inmate crouched in a pond surrounded by thick brush. Deputies took him into custody.

Almendares was in jail on weapons violations and will face felony escape charges, said the Yolo County Sheriff's Department.

GUEST COMMENTARY:

What the tourism industry can do to help West Sacramento

By Brenda Sprouse
Vice President,
Visitors Bureau
West Sacramento
Chamber of Commerce
(Best Western Harbor Inn & Suites)

Economically, tourism is an extremely important aspect of boosting revenues for both business and local government. Both should not by shy when it comes to investing in bringing those dollars to the community.

Read on for some very interesting facts about that. But first, I want you to know that the next meeting of the Visitors/Tourism Bureau Committee is Wednesday, May 15, at 2 p.m. at the Best Western Harbor Inn & Suites. If you have an interest in planning ways in which to capture the travel dollar, come to the meeting.

Your participation might very well be crucial to the future of your business as well as that of other local businesses and city government.

According to the professionals at the California Division of Tourism and the California Travel Industry Association, both of which are located in Sacramento, California's travel and tourism industry generates $55.7 billion annually, which is 6.5 percent of the Gross State Product.

Add to that the figures for payroll, $12 billion; jobs, 691,000; state tax revenue, $2 billion; local tax revenue, $1 billion; and federal tax revenue, $5 billion.

Travel and tourism spending generates jobs in eight primary sectors: eating and drinking establishments, 245,300 jobs; accommodations, 118,900; recreation, 75,500; ground transportation, 72,900; retail sales, 71,900; air transportation, 69,600; travel arrangements, 26,300; and food stores, 10,400.

The economic importance of the travel and tourism industry is often overlooked because few analysts view it as an integrated whole, choosing instead to look at its component parts; airlines, railroads, passenger ships and other transportation services, hotels, motels and restaurants.

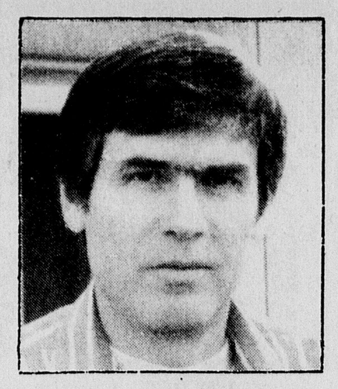
It's a fact! Men's brains shrink faster than women's

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

I was having a somewhat heated conversation with a friend the other evening when she suddenly got right in my face and said, "You know, Daryl, you're getting to be a grumpy old man!"

"What?" I exclaimed with a smile, sure that she was just putting me on.

"I'm not kidding," she said with conviction, "you really are turning into one of those grumpy old men." Later that evening, still not quite able to grasp the fact that I had just been compared to the Jack Lemon's and Walter Matthau's of the world, I decided to get out my Webster's Ninth New Collegiate dictionary and look up the word 'grumpy'. "What are you doing?" asked my wife, who was seated on the couch next to me, leisurely thumbing through the newspaper.

"Don't ask," I blurted out.

"Well," she said, doing her best Steve Martin imitation, "e-x-c-u-s-e m-e!"

"Does grumpy have one 'p' or two in it?" I asked her.

"You're looking up grumpy?"

"That's right," I said, finally locating the word. "And it says here that a grumpy person is often moody, cross, surly, and prone to fits of sulkiness and ill humor. Now tell me the truth, Mary -- I never act like that, do I?"

When my wife didn't volunteer an answer right away, I knew I was in big trouble. "I think maybe you should look at this," she finally said, digging out the health section of the Sacramento Bee and pointing to an article she had already read.

"What's it about?" I asked her.

"It's entitled 'Men's brains shrink faster as they age'."

"Very funny," I said.

"It's really pretty interesting," she assured me. "And the first paragraph says, 'Men lose brain tissue at almost three times the rate of women, curbing their memory, concentration and reasoning power -- and perhaps turning them into grumpy old men'."

"Here," I said, grabbing the newspaper from her, "give me that thing! It actually uses the term 'grumpy old men'?"

"I'm afraid so." As I began to read, I quickly learned that the article's author, Ruben Gur, a professor of psychology at the University of Pennsylvania, thinks he has found evidence that shrinking brains may make men grumpier than women because some of the tissue loss is in the left frontal region, which controls such things as attention span, abstract reasoning, mental flexibility, inhibition of impulses, and memory. He theorizes that 'Men lose more tissue because they have lower blood flow than women, particularly in the frontal lobe region. To compound matters, women's brain metabolism -- the rate at which the brain breaks down sugar -- slows while they age, but men's brains keep working at a vigorous pace'. "Mary," I blurted out, "this guy says I have a whole lot more toxic byproducts in my brain than you do, and that you're probably going to live ten years longer than me, and that you're not going to get grumpy at all."

"I know, dear," she said, patting me gently on the shoulder, "I know."

"But why should only men get grumpy?" I cried out. "It's just not fair!"

"You know," she said matter-of-factly, "I believe that's the exact same thing I used to say -- every time they rolled me past you on my way into the delivery room."

"But honestly, you really do think I've been getting grumpier?"

"I'm afraid there have been a few signs."

"Like what?" I demanded.

"I'd rather not say."

"Go ahead," I dared her, "name one -- just one."

"Okay," she said, "there is that little thing you said about Ted Kaczynski the other night."

"The Unabomber?" I asked her with surprise. "What in the world does the Unabomber have to do with me getting grumpier?"

"Well," she said, "don't you remember how you've always been against capital punishment of any kind?"

"Yeah, so what?"

"Well, don't you remember what you said, you know, about what you would like to see them do with Ted Kaczynski?"

"No," I said, suddenly worried that all those male toxic byproducts running through my poor brain might indeed already be affecting my memory.

"Well," she said, "you told me and the children that they ought to tie him down in the same room with that other idiot, Timothy McVeigh, place a hundred pound bomb in each of their laps, and light a couple of very, very slow fuses."

There was a lengthy pause as my wife and I looked at each other. "Okay, okay," I finally admitted, "so maybe I am getting a little bit grumpier in my old age. So what!"

Despite city's 'good faith':

Chlorine problems at sewage pant may draw 'small' fine of $10,000

By Steve Marschke

Lingering problems at the West Sacramento sewage treatment plant will cause state water regulators to consider a new $10,000 fine against the city. But a state inspector stressed Tuesday that the fine will be relatively small, out of respect for the good faith improvements made at the plant over the past several years.

"We are proposing a $10,000 fine for some chlorine (discharge) violations," said Richard McHenry of the California Regional Water Quality Control Board. "In terms of violations, they've been doing really well. They have taken care of 98 percent of their problems, and we are just encouraging them to get the last two percent done."

The recommended fine will be considered by the water board next month, said McHenry, unless city officials decide to simply accept the recommendation without contesting it.

Jerry Lo, West Sacramento's director of public works since 1995, said yesterday he has not yet been contacted about the proposed fine. But he agreed that the plant's operations have improved.

"Compared to 1993-94, we've come a long way," said Lo, "although I can't take credit for that."

McHenry said the proposed fine comes from a string of 28 possible violations involving excess release of chlorine in the plant's discharges into the Sacramento River since November, 1994. But some of those, said both McHenry and Lo, may be the result of faulty monitoring equipment.

"A lot of those problems weren't violations, but were computer blips that showed up as violations," said McHenry, "but there's really no way to tell."

New instrumentation has been purchased and is being calibrated to solve that problem, said Lo.

The $10,000 fine, if approved, will be relatively small compared to punitive measures the city has endured in the past.

In 1989, the state fined the city $30,000 for releasing poorly treated sewage. In 1993, it levied a $60,000 fine. And in 1994, the state fined West Sacramento $250,000 for similar problems, along with submitting false monitoring reports.

"We continued to escalate those fines during that period because the city was not doing what it was supposed to do," said McHenry. "This smaller fine is a reflection that they are now working hard to solve the problem."

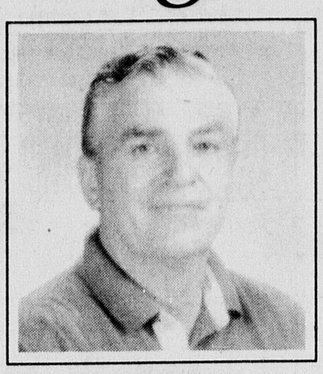
Raiders' Norm Marks:

A.D. retiring

By Chuck Robinson

After ten years of stellar service to River City High School athletics, Norm Marks has decided to step down as Director of Athletics effective the conclusion of the current school year. Mr. Marks will remain on staff as a full-time physical education instructor. A successor will be named at a later date.



NORM MARKS

Citing a desire to devote more of his energies to teaching and spend more time with his family, Mr. Marks' departure has left a void that will be difficult to fill. The popular A.D. has overseen an expansion of inter-scholastic athletics and the number of student-athletes participating in extra-curricular sports. Mr. Marks is also credited with the resurgence of the River City Athletics Booster Club.

Principal Dr. Donna White and Assistant Principal Ken Whittemore honored Coach Marks with a "Certificate of Appreciation" at a recent staff meeting. Dr. White commented, Mr. Marks has put in endless hours in an effort to make River City High School a better place. His contributions will be sorely missed."

Mr. Whittemore echoed Dr. White's comments, stating, "From a selfish standpoint, I hate to see him go. Often times he is the first to arrive and the last to leave. He has been a true pleasure to work with. You don't easily replace people of his quality."

Football coach Chris Baker, who served under Mr. Marks during his entire ten year reign, had this to say: "Our school has undergone a myriad of changes over the last decade. He has been the glue that kept our athletic programs together. It's difficult for people to fully appreciate the scope and depth of the job Norm has done. Norm possesses a rare combination of integrity, experience and people skills. Working with him has certainly been one of the highlights of my career."

RC's varsity & j.v. baseball put Encina away

By Chuck Robinson

Last Tuesday, the River City High School varsity baseball team put Encina away by a score of 10 to 2. R.C. scored 1-1-4-0-2-2-X, scoring 10 runs on 11 hits, 1 error. Encina scored 2 runs in the third on 3 hits, 4 errors. The winning pitcher was Lorenzo Vasquez.

Hitting for River City was David Jernigan, 1 for 5; Josh Castro, 2 for 3, 2B, 1 RBI; Craig Martinez, 1 for 3, 2 RBI's; Randy Byard, 1 for 3, HR, 1 RBI; Eric Jimenez, 2 for 4; Jaimes Timas, 1 for 2, 2B, 1 RBI; Angel Cardenas, 1 for 3, 2B; Marc Palamidessi, 1 for 3, 1 RBI; and Bruce Sweeten, 1 for 2, 2 RBI's.

River City was rained out on Thursday and will play a make-up game on Monday, April 29. R.C.'s record is 7-9 overall and 6-1 in league play, with a first-place standing. On Tuesday, R.C. will play at Lindhurst; Thursday at Marysville; Monday, April 29 at Bear River; Tuesday, April 30 at Colfax; and Thursday, May 2, at home against Golden Sierra. On Tuesday, May 7, they play Lincoln at home, and on Thursday, May 9, they finish up the season at Encina.

The junior varsity baseball team beat Encina by a score of 6 to 4.

The Sports Insider

By Richard Novoa

It's been ten years, but the Sacramento Kings (39-43) are in the NBA playoffs!

The Kings will open the playoffs in Seattle on Friday night at 7:30 p.m., and will play the second game of their best-of-five seires on Sunday at 6 p.m. They return to the Arco Arena Tuesday, April 30 at 7:30 p.m. for their first home playoff game in a decade. If the Kings can win at least one game, the next game will take place at the Arco on Thurday, May 2.

The Kings are 500 to 1 in Las Vegas to win the NBA title, so if they force this series to go to five games, the last game of the series will take place in Seattle on May 4.

I would love to see the Kings advance to the second round of the playoffs, but the Kings are 0-4 against the Sonics this season. Sacramento may have got a small break when All-Star forward Shawn Kemp was ejected in the Sonics' final regular-season game last Sunday. Kemp, who averages 19 points and 11 rebounds per game, should draw at least a one game suspension.

Seattle, which has won 63, 57 and 64 games the last three regular seasons, was outsed in the first round of the playoffs the past two seasons -- but not this time. Seattle has too many guns for the Kings to stop, especially Gary Payton at the point guard. Payton will run circles around Tyus Edney and Bobby Hurley.

The Kings will win one game!

But Seattle wins the series 3-1.

For the other NBA playoff series, here are my picks:

Western Conference: San Antonio 3, Phoenix 2. Utah 3, Portland 1. Los Angeles 3, Houston 2. Seattle 3, Sacramento 1.

Eastern Conference: Chicago 3, Miami 0. New York 3, Cleveland 2. Orlando 3, Detroit 0. Atlanta 3, Indiana 2.

The Giants (10-8) and A's (8-10) continue to have their pitching problems, but both teams have been plagued by injuries. The A's can sure use Mark McGwire, who is set to return to the A's lineup this week.

The Oakland Raiders made what could become the draft's greatest coup, trading up in the draft and selecting Ohio State tight end Rickey Dudley. The 49ers didn't fare as well, selecting USC's defensive end Israel Ifeanyi in the second round. Overall, the 49ers had a weak draft, picking Daryl Price, Iheany Uwaezuoko, Stephen Pitts and a pair of identical twin brothers, Sam (linebacker) and Sean Manuel (tight end) from New Mexico State.

Willie Jorrin scored a big win last Monday night at the Radisson Hotel, with a second-round knockout against Juan Carlos Salazar. Jorrin's record improves to 13-0, 8 KOs.

See ya next week!!

Game 9, between the Cardinals and A's, was rained out.

News-Ledger Editorial

What will replace the paper plant?

That the MacMillan Bloedel/Haindl Papier newsprint recycling plant fell through will come as no surprise to News-Ledger readers.

But there are a few new points worth making.

One of these points is something that was alluded to briefly last week in this space -- the fact that the permits owned by the paper plant's backers are transferrable, and the city has little power to affect the transfer of these rights to other industrial users wishing to build at the same Southport site.

This may or may not become a problem. When city officials negotiated some of these rights with the paper plant's backers, they were proud of how much they were relying on the "good faith" and "good neighbor" character of MacMillan Bloedel, and therefore did not negotiate some of the contract details as tightly as they should have.

At the same time, they left the company with plenty of room to maneuver, including the right to transfer its entitlements to another party. The city is not allowed to "unreasonably" block such a transfer.

So now an agreement built largely on respect for MacMillan Bloedel may be transferred, as they say in the sports world, to a company-to-be-named-later. If this happens, the new company may or may not be worthy of the same "good neighbor" trust.

A second observation is that a MacMillan Bloedel spokesman characterized the failure of the paper plant project solely on the long-term market outlook for the product it would produce, and not on environmental considerations such as the sewage problem.

This may well be true. But, since MacMillan Bloedel is now trying to sell its permits to develop locally, and the buyer could be someone in a similar industry, it also suits the company's interests to downplay the environmental difficulties associated with building such a plant in Southport.

Just a little something to think about.

Say 'yes' to family activities -- and 'no' to your television set

By Alan Candee
West Sacramento

Do you want more time to spend with your family? Improve your child's success in school? Enjoy a richer a healthier lifestyle? First, locate the "off" button on your TV set. Then, grab a book or bicycle or walking stick or deck of cards or cookbook or drawing pencil or...

For the better part of 25 years I have worked with children in classrooms and playgrounds as an educator, recreation administrator, librarian and parent. A former manager of Fairytale Town in Land Park, I have worked for the Sacramento Public Library since 1984.

Please join me and millions across America in celebrating National TV Turn-Off Week, April 24-30. Together we can reduce TV viewing and teach our children to initiate new leisure interests. Initially your children will resist going without the "fix" of TV, but as time passes, they will have an arsenal of interests to draw upon when their peers turn to drugs for recreation.

If you accomplish nothing else during the week, try dinner time without the TV on; 66 percent of families eat with the television turned on -- and yet most of us complain that we want more quality time with our families. A study to determine the single most significant factor among National Merit Scholars found that they sat down to dinner with their families on a regular basis -- without the TV. Nothing was a stronger indicator of academic achievement!

Another no-TV activity is "writing night." Little ones can draw pictures to send, while older students compose letters. Stamps and stickers add to the fun. Letters to companies about their products can generate great responses. Mom and Dad can write to legislators or "letters to the editor."

TOURISM: bringing the dollars home to local pockets

fornia is equivalent to the export of one mid-size automobile.

But wait, there's more!

Nearly one out of every eight dollars in travel spending nationwide is spent in California. This proportion is larger than the state's share of U.S. population, employment, or income. California is number one in travel earnings, domestic and overseas.

The "typical" American household spends $3,900 per year on traveling in the United States and aborad -- almost as much as it spends on private health care or on food, beverage and tobacco combined, and twice as much as it spends on clothing.

Travel and tourism is the third largest employer in the nation after business and health service and travel exceeds the combined payrolls of the U.S. steel and motor vehicles manufacturing industries. If California were a nation, it would rank eighth in terms of international tourism, head of Switzerland, Singapore, Mexico, Canada and Japan.

Closer to home -- Yolo County benefits to the tune of $155,170 million. West Sacramento figures are not available.

I can confidently tell you this, however; it takes money to make money and a focused, funded marketing program in West Sacramento to increase this community's take of the travel dollar would result in a significant increase to the tills of local business and the coffers of local government.

It is not the sole responsibility of business, nor is it the sole responsibility government to fund such a program. Combined responsibility and funding, however, would pay us all back ten fold.

Join the committee and help make that happen. Call me at 371-2100, or Steve Roberts, West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce executive director, at 371-7042, to get started on an exciting part of potential quality growth for this terrific community.

We have a "full plate" for the Chamber of Commerce. As things unfold and we are allowed to announce them, you'll see it here -- hopefully, first!

Here are a few things we are working on:

-- A Chamber membership directory for distribution to local consumers;

-- Riverfront marketing;

-- The Sesquicentennial celebration for the discovery of gold in California (1998);

-- The Sesquicentennial celebration of the entrance of California to the United States (2000);

-- The tenth anniversary of the incorporation of the City of West Sacramento (1997); and

-- The 50th anniversary of the creation of the West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce (1997).

Letters to the Editor

New city hall

It appears that City is ready to ask for bids on the Palamidessi/Industrial Bridge, giving Southport and the rest of West Sacramento a second intracity route and another connection between U.S. 50 and I-80. Several agreements were worked out, from rights-of-way to infrastructure financing.

Perhaps most interesting of the financial agreements is that of the Port of Sacramento to sell its present building to the City for $1.1 million. With City hall and other offices already located on second floor, almost all other City offices would be relocated. While early word was "all City offices except Planning (now at 1951 South River Road), two more floors should be enough to include Planning, too. Such a move would locate Planning within walking distance of bus stops, also.

Speaking of bus service, YoloBus recently eliminated 4 of its 8 midday runs to/from City Hall, in a move to economize. But with City going from using one to three floors, more employees and public visitors with continued limited parking space should lead to a reversal of that cutback in services. With only City offices being at 2101 Stone Blvd., we should see new signage outside designating same as (officially) "City Hall." Improvements between bus stops and City Hall (official crosswalks and maybe signals, bus shelters) will be warranted, too.

With the Port's proceeds, Port will no doubt relocate to quarters more convenient to business after bridge is built. By that time, their investment acreage will be worth more, allowing Port to sell some of said land to finance the $10 million it needs to deepen the channel and re-route/lower PG&E gas pipes in the process. One wonders if Port's office relocation plans also includes plans to relocate its railroad connection yards from south of Stone Blvd. (where its "bang-up" connections often crack up neighboring walls, windows, etc.) Let Port take its "bang-up" connections away from homes and protect itself as it builds its new offices and warehouses.

Upon completion of bridge and expanded sewer facilities (wherever the latter is finally located), watch Southport grow.

WHY ORGANIC GARDENING ISN'T JUST A BUNCH OF MANURE.

Organic gardening is a lot more than natural fertilizer. And organic gardens do a lot more than make your yard look pretty. They help make the environment healthier. So let's dig in and see how you can help.

To conserve water, use soaker hoses instead of sprinklers.

The first step to creating an environmentally friendly garden is to compost. Composting not only helps produce the bacteria, nutrients and mulch plants need, it also reduces the amount of solid waste your home creates. Another easy way to help the environment in your garden is to change the tools you use. For instance, instead of using sprinklers, try using soaker hoses. They leak moisture into the soil at slow rates, so water gets absorbed instead of running off. You may also consider using a rake, instead of gas-powered blowers.

Use a rake instead of gas-powered blowers.

Rakes use no fuel and give you some exercise. Next, think about the types of plants you plant. Consider planting perennials. Perennial beds provide refuge for animals and insects that will eat pests and reduce your need for chemicals. Finally, think about planting a tree in your backyard. Trees keep harmful carbon dioxide from entering the atmosphere and create lots of energy-saving shade.

So you see, when we say organic gardens are a good idea, it's no bull.

Over 15% of solid waste could be reduced if everyone who gardens composted.

TV: turn it off from p. 5

There are many other ways for the family to spend time together without the TV: visit the library, park or museum; take a bike ride; start a jigsaw puzzle or craft project; listen or dance to music; attend school/church activities; experience a kid-prepared meal; etc.

After the Turn-Off is over, give each family members a weekly TV allowance.

Tape shows to watch and show them without commercials to reduce the time involved.

Store the TV in a closed cabinet or in a less frequented room -- out of sight, out of mind.

Like any new habit, expect the transition to take about three weeks. Keep it up and you'll be successful.

New 'bug line' established to help those pestered by insects

From UC Davis

If something is bugging you and it has six or more legs, help is just a phone call away.

A new insect identification hot line has been established this month at the University of California, Davis, to help Northern Californians put a name to the bugs in their lives.

Residents in the 916 and 707 are codes can simply dial 1-(900)-225-BUGS. Callers will pay $3 for the first minute and $1 for each additional minute. Students and staff members from the entomology department will be on-hand between the hours of 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. to answer calls and identify both insects and spiders. If the identification or requested information are complicated and time-consuming, the caller will be transferred to a non-toll line. In particularly puzzling cases, callers may be asked to mail in a sample insect for identification.

"This process is a lot like medical diagnostics, except we'll be diagnosing an organism, rather than a disease," says Lynn Kimsey, a professor of entomology, who is launching the new program.

The UC Davis bug line is modeled after a highly successful program at the University of Minnesota. In addition to providing a community service, Kimsey hopes the new bug line also will help students hone their identification skills and learn how to deal with the public as part of a training and internship program in biological diagnostics. If the program generates sufficient public interest, the 900 number could generate funds to provide salaries for the students who staff it.

Although initially restricted to two Northern California area codes, the program may eventually expand to cover the entire state and also offer diagnostic services for weeds and animal pests.

"We're particularly excited about this service because it will extend the expertise of the university to the huge urban and suburban communities of the state," said Kimsey.

Golden State Middle School announces winners in women's history essay contest

From Golden State Middle School

The English Department at Golden State Middle School sponsored an essay contest in March in honor of Women's History Month. Students were asked to write about a special woman in their lives. Essays were judged on content, style, and mechanics. Many excellent papers were entered, which made judging difficult. Winners were selected at each grade level.

They are as follows:

Sixth grade: Shelley Tuttle and Stephen Marquez, tie for first place; and Alex Matthews and Chelsea Coulombe, honorable mentions.

Julliard Quartet coming to Davis

From the U.C. Davis News Service

"The biting rhythm, the scrupulous attention to the score's direction, the phenomenal tautness of line, the concentrated energy..." (New York Times), these attributes easily describe the Juilliard String Quartet. Approach their 50th anniversary season, they are "the yardstick against which all other groups are measured" (Newsweek). The three time Grammy Award-winning quartet will appear on Sunday, May 12, at 8 p.m. in Freeborn Hall on the UC Davis campus. This will be the final performance in the 1995-96 UC Davis Presents Concert Series.

The Juilliard String Quartet is being supported by Dean and Karen Karnopp. There will be a lecture demonstration and Benefit Supper prior to the concert coordinated by the Friends of the UC Davis Presents. For more information, call the UC Davis Presents office at 757-3199.

The evening will consist of the following program: Quartet in G Major, K. 387 (Mozart), Quartet No. 2 (Sessions), and Quartet in C sharp Minor, Op. 131 (Beethoven).

Since their inception, the Juilliard String Quartet has established and maintained a reputation as one of the world's great string quartets. Their live performances are renowned for their interpretive insight and vitality, and their repertory is arguably the most extensive of any quartet in history. They "continue to amaze with the freshness and intensity they invariably bring to every corner of their vast repertory" (New York Times). In performance, on recordings and in the training of young musicians, their renditions of the standard string quartet literature are widely considered to be definitive.

Formed in 1946 at the behest of William Schuman, then president of The Juilliard School, the envisioned effects were of a resident quartet to serve to both teaching and performing capacities. As faculty at Juilliard, the Quartet has helped train a number of other prominent string quartets, including the Emerson, Tokyo, Shanghai, Lark, Essex, and St. Lawrence String Quartets. As performers, over the past four and a half decades, the Quartet has been acclaimed in concert throughout the United States, Europe, Asia, South America, and the Pacific. The quartet has been a guest at virtually all of the world's important music festivals and has appeared with almost al the major symphony orchestras in performance of concertos for string quartet.

In 1961 they were the first American string quartet to visit the Soviet Union and a year later established a continuing residency at the Library of Congress, where it performs on the institution's matched set of Stradivarius instruments. They have made well over 100 recordings and received their first Grammy Award for their digital recordings of Beethoven's Quartets.

They received their second and third Grammy Awards for the complete Schoenberg Quartets and for the Debussy and Ravel Quartets. In 1986 they were inducted into the Hall of Fame of the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences for the recording of the complete Bartok String Quartets. Also in 1986 they were the first chamber group to receive the Arturo Toscanini Artistic Achievement Award. They have also won the German Records Critic Award for Lifetime Achievement in the recording industry and the International Society of Performing Arts Administrator's Tiffany Award.

The Quartet's discography is the most extensive of any ensemble in history, partly due to their dedication to not only the playing of standard string literature, but contemporary composers as well, from Bach, Bartok, and Beethoven to collaborations with such artists as Leonard Bernstein, Claudio Arrau and Jean-Pierre Rampal. In May 1994, the Quartet's new Sony Classical recording of quartets by Debussy, Ravel, and Dutilleux was selected by the Times Magazine of London as one of the 100 Best Classical CDs ever recorded.

All the members of the Juilliard String Quartet are American-born and trained. First violinist Robert Mann, the only original member of the Quartet, is a native of Portland, Oregon and alumnus of The Juilliard School. Joel Smirnoff, second violinist, is a native of New York City and attended the University of Chicago and The Juilliard School. Violist Samuel Rhodes is also a native of New York City and is a graduate of Queens College and Princeton University. Cellist Joel Krosnick, a native of Connecticut, trained with William D'Amato, Luigi Silva, Jens Nygaard and Claus Adams (whom he succeeded in the Quartet).

Tickets for this event are $26/$21 general and $13/$10.50 for UCD students and children. They are available by calling the campus box office at 752-1915, or all BASS Outlets. Accommodations for persons with a disability may be made by contacting the campus box office.

WASHINGTON NEWS ITEMS

The Sacramento River registered 16 feet 4 inches U. S. gauge at the S. P. bridge yesterday.

G. A. Henrye, local manager for the General Petroleum Company, has an established and unbounded faith in the future of this section of the state, particularly in the business of the General Petroleum Corporation for whom he is chief in the West Sacramento plant. Mr. Henrye has just built himself a new home in East Sacramento at 3915 T Street and moved there last Saturday from his old home at 2811 G St. Mostly all his time is spent at the West Sacramento plant except that which he uses in occasional trips around the territory with his men.

Mike Belich is a speedy boy of the Westgate district and sometimes takes chances in driving the family car on his trips around Sacramento and the select portions of East Sacramento. But Mike traveled too fast the other day and was overhauled by a traffic cop. Going thirty-five miles an hour in a thickly populated district, Mike was oblivious to everything except the exhilaration of covering ground at that wonderful speed. Last Tuesday he was overhauled again by the judge in that district and his license was suspended for thirty days. He has promised his folks that he will never again go faster in the family automobile than three miles an hour.

J. N. Carroll, owner of the West Sacramento Auto Exchange, has just sold his interest and lease to another firm of automobile mechanics and traders consisting of J. A. Newman and Joseph Schulke. Carroll has been owner of the exchange for about a year and has done a growing and remunerative business at the corner of Fifth and Margaret Streets. In taking over the business, Newman and Schulke promised to conduct it in a first class manner and being thoroughly accomplished machinists, expect to make returns on their invested capital and put away a few shekels periodically. They will pursue the same line of business as Carroll had during the past year.

George W. Roberts, owner of the grocery in the West Sacramento Auto Camp, and his wife have taken up new quarters in a three-room apartment in one of the new buildings lately erected by Pearson Brothers. Roberts enjoys a splendid business not alone with the residents of the camp but with the neighbors in the surrounding portion of town.

Work was started this forenoon by Supervisor Buckingham in completing the crossing at Kiesel Station on the Sacramento Northern Railway near Elkhorn. Before the heavy rains of last winter the crossing was widened and graded and filled to some extent but before the filling settled a heavy rain came along and made a puddle of the entire crossing. Since that time some repairs have been made so as to place the crossing in passable condition. The work being done today will place it above reproach.

THE ROAD BETWEEN ELKHORN AND WOODLAND IS IN NO CONDITION FOR AUTOMOBILE TRAVEL. MANY PERSONS BELIEVING THAT THE ROAD IS PASSABLE MAKE THE TRIP FROM WASHINGTON TO ELKHORN AND ARE THEN FORCED TO RETURN TO WASHINGTON AND PROCEED VIA DAVIS. THE ROAD BETWEEN ELKHORN AND WOODLAND WILL NOT BE FIT FOR AUTO TRAVEL FOR AT LEAST FIFTEEN OR TWENTY DAYS.

Registration of dogs has been active in this section of Yolo County since an ordinance was passed by the supervisors that all dogs in the county must be registered. Judge Barry has already registered thirty in this district and as soon as he can secure blanks will have many more to place on the list. The registration fee is 50 cents.

T. Morelli swore to a complaint in Judge Barry's court last Monday against Thomas Dupzyk for battery on the Morelli boy about six years of age. Dupzyk claims that the boy became mischievous and he shook him. The trial will take place some day next week.

A little absent-minded and dreaming of the business he is going to transact at his new service station, Jack Reuther nearly made a fatal mistake the other day while he was following his regular line of business. Jack is the town barber in Washington and the great care which he execises on his customers has been remarked by many of them. But the other day he made a mistake. "Doc" Miller, a farmer of the West Sacramento district, hasn't a great deal of hirsute adornment on the top of his head, although he has an abundance around the edges. Genially passing the time of day with Reuther, "Doc" got on the barber chair. Jack took the clippers, the ones with the electric attachment, and started under the right ear of his patient. Going clear across he took what few little hairs were left on top of "Doc's" head and to his great astonishment, "Doc" was out of the chair in half a second. The three lone hairs that were left were clipped to the roots by Reuther and since that time Jack has secured for him a new tonic that promises to restore a full growth even on concrete.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Todhunter, Mrs. Annie Barry and grandson, Seth Barry, Jr., spent Sunday on a trip to San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. Reese Peek of Colfax spent the week-end here with relatives. They were en route to San Francisco to spend a two weeks' vacation.

DUAL ELECTRIC SERVICE TO BE MAINTAINED TO WESTGATE

Fearing that trouble may come about in a single service to the factories and rice mills in West Sacramento, the Pacific Gas and Electric Company has finished a new line of electric power to the mills and factories in West Sacramento.

The old line extended from the steam plant near the American River along Front street and across the river underneath at I street.

The new line crosses the large towers north of the old Pioneer Mill building, thence south along Second street to M street and thence along the levee to the bean warehouse, the Horst compressors, the two rice mills and the large pumping plants of the West Sacramento Company.

Trouble was anticipated some time ago on this old line at the Sacramento side of the river. None of the plants, however, were shut down, but in order to guarantee as far as possible a continuous supply of juice the local manager, E. W. Florence, decided on the installation above mentioned.

The old line will still be maintained as an emergency line but the new installation will be the conveyance for the power.

YOUNG BOY KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT AT BRYTE

Last Sunday Mitchell Paulkoff, son of Jack and Frances Paulkoff, was killed on the highway between the Bryte postoffice and the Rose orchard.

The death of the child came about through an auto accident in which George Herbert, a painter of Sacramento, was the driver.

Herbert was driving about thirty miles an hour, according to the story he told Sheriff J. W. Monroe, who happened on the scene shortly after the accident occurred.

His story was verified by Ernest Butterfield, E. L. Pierce and K. L. Weisler, all of Sacramento, who were riding with the driver of the death automobile.

Immediately after striking the boy Herbert stopped his car and rushed the lad to the Sacramento emergency hospital. He was pronounced dead there by Dr. Henrickson as a result of a fractured skull and hemorrhage.

According to witnesses, the lad, with his brother, George, and Peter Masloff, were walking on the highway when the latter two decided to cross. Seeing his playmates cross, young Paulkoff decided to also cross the road, and jumped in front of the automobile.

Vision of the boy was obstructed by a passing automobile, Herbert told the sheriff, and consequently, he was not able to stop the car in time to avoid hitting the boy who was crushed to the pavement.

Herbert, who is a painter in Sacramento, was badly wrought up over the accident, the sheriff stated, and did all he was able to do to save the life of the child. As the sheriff termed the accident unavoidable, he was not arrested, and will be available at any time the inquest is held.

GENERAL PETROLEUM PLANT AT WOODLAND NEARLY COMPLETED

Next Saturday a test will be made of the lately constructed plant of the General Petroleum Corporation at Woodland. The first carload of gasoline will be delivered at the plant Saturday and a test of the receiving plant will then be made.

As business demands it the Woodland plant will be enlarged to give the best possible service to the dealers in that locality and should a first class service prompt better business the corporation may establish other subsidiary plants at other towns on the West Side.

Dixon will likely be the next point at which a sub-base will be constructed.

BOOSTERS' CLUB HAD LARGE MEETING LAST TUESDAY

The Washington Boosters' Club had one of its largest meetings last Tuesday evening in the town hall.

Some matters of importance were taken up, one especially calling attention to the chuck holes that are forming on the overhead surfacing of the Southern Pacific bridge.

Some time ago the attention of the corporation was drawn to this fact, but so far the club has had no return on the question.

WASHINGTON AND WESTGATE BUS TO START MAY 1

In another column of this issue will be found the time table that will be followed, at least for a start, in giving the people of Washington and Westgate a bus service.

Permission has been received already from the State Railroad Commission for the operation of this bus and the fares to be charged are part of that permit.

For a start Joe and Victoria Misetich, owners of the bus service, are going to use two seven-passenger automobiles, but as occasion demands it that service will be improved with the addition of a large bus carrying between thirty and forty people.

The fare to Washington will be 5 cents. The fare to Westgate is 11 cents.

The line of travel will be from the Union Station at Fifth and I streets in Sacramento, thence south to L, to Second, to the Southern Pacific bridge, to Fifth street, to the subway, where the 5 cent limit will end. South of the subway to Westgate the fare will be 11 cents. The return trips will be charged similarly. The return trip will pursue the same line except that on arrivel at Second and I streets in Sacramento the bus will proceed eastward to the Union Station.

The bus service has already received the approval and endorsement of the Washington Boosters' Club and of the West Sacramento Improvement Association.

CONGRESSWOMAN DECLARES DRY LAW A GREAT FAILURE

Washington, April 17. — The San Francisco Examiner quotes Congresswoman Norton under above date as saying:

A stringent indictment of prohibition was presented to the senate subcommittee by a woman—Mrs. Mary T. Norton of New Jersey, one of the three women members of Congress.

Differing with other women who have upheld and praised conditions created by the Volstead law, Mrs. Norton told the committee that prohibition is corrupting the youth of the country, destroying home life, increasing the drug habit and "killing people" with its poisons.

She added:

"It's a disastrous failure, it cannot be enforced, and it should be modified.

"I believe a great many men and women endorsed prohibition when it became a law of this country with the absolute conviction that it would promote temperance.

"Many of these same men and women are now working for a repeal of the law they then advocated, because they realize it has been a failure and has set back the work accomplished through many years to make our country temperate.

"Prohibition and temperance have no relation to each other. You must have public opinion behind a law to make it effective.

"Therefore, it would seem that there is but one solution to the horrible condition in our country today—a condition which causes every thoughtful father and mother to wonder what will become of their children if the condition is not remedied.

"The solution lies in a referendum of the people and allow them to decide definitely whether or not they are in favor of prohibition.

"The woman who used to suffer from a drunken husband now suffers from a crazy husband, who turned to narcotics because he cannot get good liquor. That was true in three cases out of fifteen I personally investigated."

She also declared the morals of America's youth were being destroyed by prohibition. She also told of liquor being sold in government veterans' hospitals.

She added:

"I have a letter here from a veteran which says that poisonous liquor was sold in his hospital and wounded veterans died from it," she added.

As for the drys' claim of prosperity under prohibition, Mrs. Norton asked:

"I would like to ask which is more important, to keep the feet of a child warm or to safeguard its character and perhaps its very life?"

THE OTHER MAN

By Doug Malloch

Perhaps he sometimes slipped a bit—
Well, so have you.
Perhaps some things he ought to quit—
Well, so should you.
Perhaps he may have faltered—why?
Why, all men do, and so have I.
You must admit, unless you lie.
That so have you.

Perhaps if we would stop and think
Both I and you.
When painting someone black as ink,
As some folks do,
Perhaps, if we would recollect.
Perfection we would not expect,
But just a man half-way correct,
Like me and you.

FILLING FOR ROADWAY NEAR M ST. BRIDGE IS TAKING SHAPE

Contractor Tucker is solving the problem of filling for the highway that is to be built from the M Street bridge west as far as the new highway in West Sacramento and which will pass under the new subway.

The work has been tedious and expensive. Instead of floating the sand taken out of the river westward to the borrow pit north of the railroad embankment, the dredger Neptune is now delivering the sand first on the levee north of the bridge and later delivering it with another swing of the great boom close to the end of the bridge.

Four-horse scrapers are then used to get the filling into the desired location.

Yesterday the grade at the end of the bridge was nearly completed and will likely be finished today.

West of Second Street only a small portion of the filling has yet been deposited. A drag has been placed at Fifth Street which drags the sand westward to the low points.

Contractor Tucker has thirty days left in which to complete his contract and he believes he can finish the job in that time.

The trough that was originally designed to float the sand to destination has been removed except for a small portion near the end of the bridge.

WESTERN HOTEL TO BE OPERATED UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

The sale of the Western Hotel, Second and Third, on K street, to Elmer E. Todd and Volney L. Fox on April 1st, was revealed Saturday with the filing of papers in connection with the deal in the office of County Recorder C. A. Root.

The consideration involved was $42,000. Thirty-three thousand dollars of the amount is secured by a mortgage held by the Capital National Bank.

The sale was made by Louis Mercier, who had been the owner of the hotel for some time.

Fox, one of the new owners, was formerly associated in the ownership of the Hotel Land.

The sale was confined to the business and personal property of the hotel and does not include the real estate.

ST. JOSEPH'S ACADEMY TO HAVE NEW HIGH SCHOOL BUILDING

Work will be started in the near future on a new grammar and high school building, which will comprise an addition to the St. Joseph's Academy at Ninth and F streets. Congestion at the academy, owned by the Sacramento diocese of the Catholic Church, will be relieved by the new building, which will cost in the neighborhood of $75,000.

Spanish architecture will predominate in the design for the new school.

PEDESTRIAN BADLY INJURED WHEN STRUCK ON HIGHWAY

G. Sanchez, 29 years old, 121 P St., was injured Sunday when knocked to the pavement by an automobile driven by Al Greenwood on the Davis highway. At the emergency hospital it was said that Sanchez suffered a possible fracture of the skull, a leg fracture and body bruises. He was removed to the county hospital.

Greenwood told Deputy Sheriff Harry Murphy Sanchez walked to the center of the pavement to halt him and when another machine approached became confused and walked in front of Greenwood's car.

GLIDE FERRY STILL OUT OF COMMISSION

Because of prevailing high water and the unsafe condition of the Glide ferry, Supervisor Buckingham and County Engineer Deterding of Sacramento have decided to hold the craft out of commission until repairs can be made. The boat is in poor condition, having been damaged during the late high water period.

To prevent accidents those officials decided to take the boat out for repairs, but so far have been unable to move it so that those repairs could be made.

COSTLY FERRY AT CLARKSBURG TO BE LAID UP NEXT WEEK

Figures on the Clarksburg ferry show that thoroughfare to be using an exceptionally large amount of gasoline. The figures were obtained from the office of County Auditor R. P. Wallace while he was checking over to determine the amount of refund on the number of gallons used in a certain period.

For fifty-six days, between October 27 and December 27, the figures tendered Wallace show that the ferry used 5256 gallons of gasoline, or an average of 93.86 gallons a day.

On this amount of gasoline the county received $105.12 refund according to Wallace. This is from the state as the gasoline tax does not cover counties.

The Clarksburg ferry is one of the busiest in the county, due to the fact that much river travel from the rich delta section on the Yolo side is transferred to the Sacramento County side, as better roads are located there.

It is held by many that a bridge across the river at a convenient point or a paved road up the river to Washington would eliminate much of the expense to the county in operating the ferry.

Supervisor Buckingham advises the ferry will be laid up for repairs next Monday for about three days, and residents of that district must use the Freeport ferry or the West Sacramento road.

RC career fair bigger and better than ever

By Fouzia Fazel
Staff Writer

This year's Career Fair was bigger and much better with over 70 businesses, including Bank of America, CSUS, ITT Technical Institute, The Sacramento Bee, California Conservation Corps and Sac City Cosmetology, representing hundreds of potential careers for the students. Presenters were stationed at tables providing information about careers within their businesses and career fields.

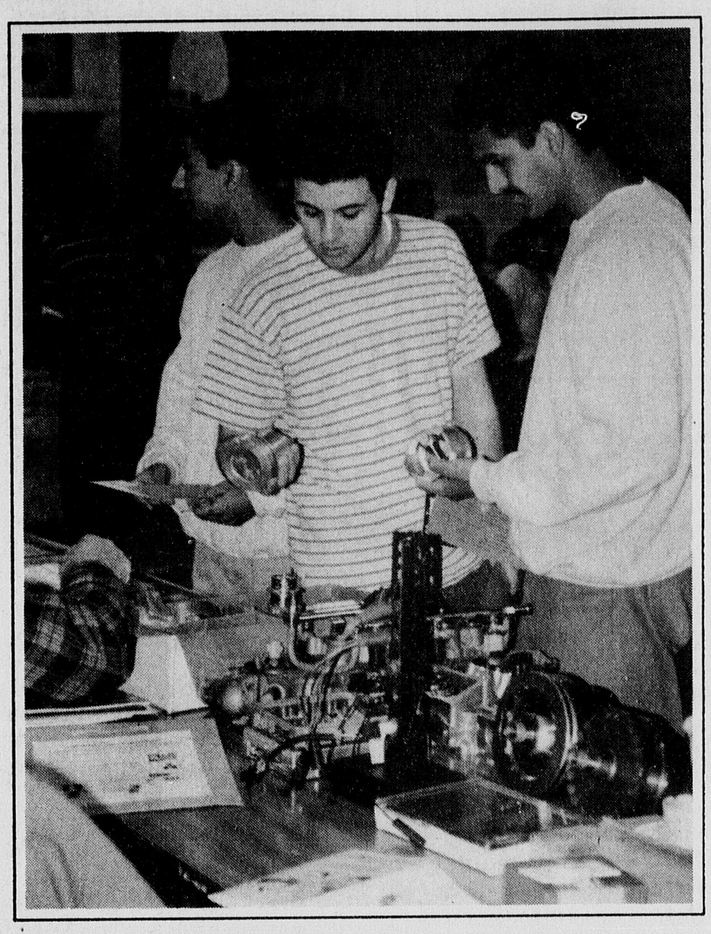
The presenters booths were located in the library, the gym and the cafeteria. They provided the students with pamphlets, brochures and even applications. Several students were filling out applications and giving interviews right on the spot.

Many students were of the opinion that this year was better than last.

"It was much better spaced," said Kammy Ujagar. "Plus it gives people a chance to see the diversity of businesses and the different opportunities that are open in today's job market," she continued.

Others were happy that they got out of class and found some more interesting facts about the careers and fields that they were interested in. "I got a free pen," yelled Rebekah Shubin happily, when asked what she liked best about the fair.

Indeed, the businesses had some nice things to give away. The California Conservation Corps even had a smaller version of Wheel of Fortune to attract the students. Bill Reeves, the CCC Representative, asked students basic questions, and if answered correctly, they spun the wheel for prizes such as drink bottles.



Students get a close look at automotive technology

Many of the businesses wanted the students to know that there are many job opportunities out there.

"Get as much schooling as possible," advises Mike Foley of the West Sacramento Fire Department.

"Enjoy school and join as many clubs as you can," advises Bill Reeves of the CCC. "And go to college," he added.

"Look at the options offered to you for a goal," states Sergeant AR Renters of the US Marine Corps.

Several of the presenters were here for the second time. Others were even more familiar with the school, because they had gone here when it was Marshal High. "The gym looks the same as it did twenty years ago," remembers Jim Thweatt from River City Therapy.

The businesses were also impressed that everything was so well organized. They especially liked the goodies that were offered to them in the Career Center, where leadership students helped the presenters feel more at home by refilling their coffee cups.

Teachers from the land of the Nile on campus

By Fouzia Fazel
Staff Writer

As most of you may have noticed, there are five Egyptian teachers visiting River City. They will stay here until the end of April observing how the American educational system works. Before coming to America through the Fulbright Commission, they had to pass several difficult tests, which included writing essays and giving interviews. "It's an honor to have them here," stated Mr. Rodriguez. "They had to meet very rigorous requirements, so they are the cream of the crop. I think they are having good experiences here, and I want to thank the teachers for opening their rooms to them."

Prior to visiting River City, they visited elementary and high schools in Woodland. They all agree that RC is the "best school in this area."

In Egypt, a normal school day starts at 8 a.m. and ends about 3 p.m. Each morning the students take roll on the playground, and salute their flag, similar to what we do on Mondays.

Instead of the students going to their teachers' classes, the teachers are the ones that change rooms. "By the end of the day we are exhausted," stated Abeer Abedel Kader.

English assignments consist of many activities, such as reading their text books, drama and arts activities, reading books such as Charles Dickens and memorizing plays of Shakespeare.

These teachers seem to be very close to their students. Many of Abeer's students were crying when they found out that their favorite teacher was leaving. "Please don't leave us," she remembers her students saying sadly. She even had to hide the last day, so she didn't have to face her students.

The public schools in Egypt are separated by gender. Most of the students are very much into their studies. They are respectful and very quiet. "But they are no angels," stated Sameh Abd El Kader.

"We have many naughty students," said Saber Hassanein, "especially in high schools."

Discipline is handled much the same as it is here, with parent conferences and suspensions. However, in severe cases, they will be sent to the head master, (principal), who might get a stick out and hit the students once on the hand. "This is not done to torture the student," said Mohamed El Sayed, "but to teach the student a lesson."

The kids in Egypt don't have much free time because of the homework and other studies that are assigned to them. They also have to wear uniforms to school. Comparing the students at RC, Mohamed said, "The kids are very friendly, but some of them don't seem to be very interested in school."

"And during first period they look so sleepy," said Saber.

Public schools in Egypt start teaching the students English in fourth grade, but the private schools start teaching in either English or French in kindergarten. Foreigners living in Egypt send their kids to private schools since they have the money. These schools are not separated by gender.

Because the teachers in Egypt get very low salaries, they try to earn additional money with private tutoring. "We really love our students," said Saber. "And we love to teach," he added.

These teachers give compliments to Dr. White. They appreciate the fact that she is cheerful and helpful. The principals in Egypt don't usually interact with the teachers.

River City wishes our visitors the best. We hope they enjoy their stay. Salaam aleikum.

ASB officer elected for 96-97

Marie Vasi wins only contested seat

By Jessica Honsinger
Staff Writer

The leaders of RC have been chosen! Elections for Associated Student Body officers were held Wednesday, April 10. President, vice president, and treasurer were all uncontested. The only actual competition was between sophomore Marie Vasi and freshman Kim Bettencourt for secretary.

ASB Officers for the 1996-1997 school year are: president, Alyssa Murphy; vice president, Carlos Martinez; treasurer, Anthony Venditti; and secretary, Marie Vasi.

Elections for class officers will be held April 24, with candidates' speeches given the day before.

Sports spring into action

Softball

The varsity softball team didn't start off on the right foot this season, but they have improved. 10-9 (5-2 league) was their record as of April 18th, and the league record shows the team's improvement.

"Our defense has jelled. We have good pitching and a good E.R.A. (Earned Run Average)," said Coach Hannagan.

The team would sure like to beat Bear River, and they almost got a chance to do that on the 18th. The softball team was on the field, ready to go, and what happens? The game is cancelled because of bad weather.

Tennis

"We are doing an excellent job", said Coach Brooks. The tennis team is shooting for the playoffs where only the top two teams in each league advance.

Mirthala Santizo, ranked number one on the team, says, "The tennis team will definitely make the playoffs and we have a pretty good chance of succeeding in the playoffs. I'm planning on making the finals."

RCHS tennis team was to have faced off against Bear River on the 18th in what was a very important game. BR was ranked number one last season. Unfortunately, the teams did not get the chance to play each other because Bear River had to cancel the match.

Golf

0-12 isn't a statistic any team likes but, the reason why the RC golf team isn't doing so well is because there are many rookies on the team. "We have several beginners and young players on the team, for our future years," said Coach West.

Although the record may not show it, the golf team is improving. Kevin Bagdazian had a hole in one at Lighthouse. "Most golfers play their whole life and don't get a hole-in-one," but Kevin did.

Coach West would like to finish off the season by having one or more players making all-league, and perhaps that may make up for the season.

RC cheers for this Raider of the Month

By Mirthala Santizo
Staff Writer

Look for a March Raider of the Month in the middle of the quad each day after school, working very hard with her cheerleading squad. Senior Cassie Hawkins has been chosen because of her dedication to the school. She is involved in many activities, such as cheerleading (of course), yearbook, Leadership, Healthy Kids, Renaissance and Link Crew.

Her all-time favorite is cheerleading. "I like dancing a lot," she said. "This is the first year we went to competition and I love my squad." Cheerleading also gave her her most memorable RC moment. "It was when I first performed at a rally," she said. "I was really scared and nervous."

Cassie has been dancing from the age of two. She still goes to a dance class at Step One. Her favorite food is lobster and she loves listening to an East Coast rap band, Wu Tang Clan.

Traveling is another thing that Cassie likes. She's been to Hawaii and Florida, but her favorite place is right here in California. "I like going to Disneyland because it makes you feel like a kid again," she said.

Cassie's class schedule is as busy as her extracurricular life. She's a TA for Baker, and has Advanced TRAM, AP Economics, Leadership, Yearbook and Desktop Publishing. Her favorite class is Yearbook. "It's neat to put something together," she said, "and see the pages that I accomplished."

In the future Cassie plans to go American River College and then transfer to Sacramento State. She will either major in criminology or fire science. She would also like to get on the Sac. State dance team. She wants to make dancing a more important part of her life.

Cassie would like to make the world better by going into a field that helps people. "I think that if everybody helps out, it would make the world better," said Cassie.

World traveling teacher chosen as March Staff of the Month

By Mirthala Santizo
Staff Writer

Which teacher is letting her students dissect fetal pigs and is March Staff of the Month? It's Mrs. Jain. Mrs. Jain has taught at RC for six years and at State University New York (SUNY), Buffalo for one year. "I like teaching because you learn more with teaching and you get to share the knowledge with others," she said. "I also like the interaction with students." Mrs. Jain teaches Biology, Honors Biology and Physiology. "I like the science department a lot," she said. "It's very strong." She also believes that the staff is very supportive and the students are wonderful.

Mrs. Jain was born in India and attended the University of Delhi. After five years, she got her Master in Botany. She transferred to SUNY, Buffalo, where she got her Masters in Molecular Biology in two years.

Mrs. Jain is a vegetarian and loves Mexican food. She loves classical music and being involved in a lot of outdoor activities, such as walking and camping. Reading is her favorite pastime.

Another thing that Mrs. Jain likes to do is to travel. She has visited her home in India, places in Europe, Singapore, Mexico and numerous places in the United States, such as Florida and Hawaii. Her favorite place is, of course, India. "My heart belongs there," she said. She goes there every year to see her family. Because of her teaching schedule, she goes in the summer. "It's very hot there," she said, "so we go to 'hill stations' which is a name for a cooler place up north."

Mrs. Jain feels that since we have all this technology we should be able to end world hunger.

Saelee draws honors

ASB President is Raider of the Month

By Mirthala Santizo
Staff Writer

Which senior carries a huge cardboard portfolio full of drawings up and down the hallway? It's ASB president and Raider of the Month, Senh Saelee. Senh spends a lot of time drawing and painting. He's been drawing ever since kindergarten and likes it because he gets to express his feelings. Senh is planning to enroll at the Art Institute of Seattle. It has a visual communications program, and Senh plans to draw for commercials and magazines. He eventually wants to become an art director for movies. "I like Seattle because of the atmosphere," he said. "The people are more relaxed and the city is real nice."

Senh has been in many different clubs and sports in high school, but the one that he likes the most is Student Government. "I get to work with people and I've learned different aspects of government," he said.

Senh likes to eat Chinese food. His favorite music is as different as 70's rock and roll and hip hop. His favorite bands are Santana, Fugees and Dire Straits. He especially likes the song Black Magic Woman by Santana. Senh also likes to shoot hoops sometimes, even though his career is over.

Senh's most memorable RC moment was when he did a dance skit for the Renaissance Rally recently. "It really surprised people because it's the last thing they expect to see me do," he said.

Senh's life is busy with activities, but that doesn't mean that his classes are easy. He's taking AP English, Physics, AP Economics, Leadership, AP Math, and AP Studio Art.

Senh's comment on making the world a better place was, "The last thing you want to do is lie to yourself, and the only way to avoid that is to be yourself."

Why am I to die?

I went to a party, Mom. I remembered what you said.
You told me not to drink, Mom, so I drank Coke instead.
I felt really proud inside, Mom, the way you said I would.
I didn't drink and drive, Mom, though the others said I should.

I knew I did the right thing, Mom, as everyone drove out of sight.
As I got into my car, Mom, I knew I'd get home alright.
I started to drive away, Mom, but as I pulled into the road,
The other guy didn't see me, Mom. He hit me like a load.

So I lie here on the pavement, Mom. I hear the policemen say
The other guy is drunk, Mom, and I'm the one who will pay.
I'm lying here dying, Mom. I wish you'd get here soon.
How come this happened to me, Mom? My life's popped like a balloon.

There is blood all around me, Mom. Most of it is mine.
I hear the paramedics say, Mom, I'll die in a short time.
I just wanted to tell you, Mom, I swear I didn't drink.
It was the others, Mom. The others didn't think.
He didn't know where he was going, Mom. He was at the same party as I.
The only difference is, Mom, he drank and I will die.

Why do people drink, Mom? It can ruin your whole life.
I'm feeling sharp pains now, Mom, pains just like a knife.
The guy who hit me is walking, Mom. I don't think that is fair.
I'm lying here dying, Mom, and all he can do is stare.

Tell my sister not to cry, Mom. Tell Daddy to be brave.
And when I get to heaven, write "Daddy's Girl" on my grave.
Someone should have told him, Mom, not to drink and drive.
If only they had told him, I would still be alive.

My breath is getting shorter, Mom. I'm becoming very scared.
Please don't cry for me, Mom. When I needed you, you were always there.
I have one last question, Mom, before I say goodbye.
I'm not the one who drank, Mom, so why am I to die?

50 percent of RC students surveyed drink on a regular basis

Raquel DeLaPaz
Staff Writer

How old do you need to be to drink alcohol? The law says 21. What do teenagers think? Well, according to a survey compiled by The Review staff, 50 percent of the students at River City already drink on a regular basis. This survey showed that the teens who drank were mostly upperclassmen, and no matter what anyone says the girls don't drink any less than the boys.

The strange thing about the survey was that almost every student believes that alcohol is addictive and that there is a teenage drinking problem. You are probably thinking, "If so many students think that alcohol is so addictive and is such a problem, then why do they do it themselves?" The most common answer received from these kids was, "I can handle it!"

The last person I heard say that ended up in rehab fighting each day to survive the overwhelming temptation of the bottle. The reality of it is you can't handle it, especially with the still-developing teenage body.

The most alarming thing revealed while questioning the students was that many admitted that they have driven drunk. They may have said that "it only happened once" or "I only did it because I had no other choice and no way home." Hello people! Wake up! Once is one time too many, and you do have a choice whether to drink or not. If you found it totally necessary to drink, then you should have made arrangements for a ride ahead of time or brought a designated driver.

Some students said, "I don't drive too bad when I drink." One guy even said that he drives better when he is drunk. Ya...sure, buddy!

Almost every student believes... that there is a teenage drinking problem.

The cruel consequences of drunk driving as a teen are as follows: You could get your license taken away, your car towed, and you could spend the night in the slammer. These consequences are nothing compared to the ultimate. You could seriously injure or kill another innocent human being. Yes, then you would be a murderer. And it wouldn't be just any careless accident because you could have prevented it. Drinking is your choice.

When you drink, before you drive, think about the mother you might take away from her children or that little boy in the back seat just waiting to get home to his nice warm bed that you might kill. Or think about your best friend in the passenger seat whose life you could take away. Think about it! It's not just your life that can be lost.

Prom is Friday, and we all know that alcohol will be circulated all over the place. Be responsible. Make arrangements before hand. Call Friday Night Live's Safe Rides 1-800-499-RIDE. It's free and confidential.

And parents out there, listen. Our poll indicates that fifty percent of the students at River City drink. That means one out of two. It could be your child. Get involved. It is your business, too.

Have fun at prom, but keep this in mind: If you're not mature enough to handle the responsibility of drinking then you aren't old enough, and I don't care if you're 50.

Alcohol Facts

-- 87 percent of high school seniors say they've used alcohol

-- Two out of three teens who drink say they can buy there own beverages.

-- Of kids under 18 in state-operated juvenile institutions, 31.9 pecent were under the influnce of alcohol at the time they were arrested.

-- In 1991, more than 126,000 people admitted to state-funded alcohol treatment programs were under the age of 21.

Cheerleaders cheerfully help out at cheerleading tryouts

'96-'97 cheerleaders announced

By Carolina Avina
Staff Writer

If you think that shouting "We are number one!" and "Go Raiders!" is too easy, try saying that to the 40 girls who have been shouting it for about a month now.

On April 19, RC had the great task of selecting the 1996-97 River City cheerleaders. Fourteen talented and well-deserving young women were honored to be part of the most spirited group on campus.

Named to the varsity squad were Amy Greenhalgh, Holly Mendes, Angela Mochel, Jennifer Mcfadden, Jennifer Newkirk, Jennifer Ortega, Kristin Pruitt and newcomer Erin Dragon.

Chosen for JV were Tabitha Amick, Lisa Aragon, Jamie Forry, Amanda Lamor, Sarah Leisure, Allison Miller, Cathy Smith, and Katie Young.

Prior to "Judgment Day," the day of try-outs, girls from grades 8 through 11, attended clinics held every day after school and run by senior cheerleaders Cassie Hawkins, Heather Mayhew, and Faith Hiatt. "We taught them jumps, helped them with their dances, and showed them basic moves," said Cassie Hawkins. "And it wasn't just the senior cheerleaders helping. The underclassmen also helped a lot," she added.

The girls had to learn a cheer that was shown to them, make up moves for another cheer, choreograph a one to two-minute dance routine, and demonstrate their ability to do a few of the basic jumps.

In addition to the physical aspect of the try-outs, there was also an interview in which the girls discussed their reliability as students and their commitment to the squad.

Five judges, all former cheerleaders, judged on the candidates' enthusiasm, creativity, and on how sharply they hit their moves.

I wanted to learn first hand why some of the girls would put themselves through such trouble and hard work. I asked Erin Dragon why she wanted to become a cheerleader. She said, "I have a lot of enthusiasm and although there are many girls who are really good and it's intimidating at times, I have confidence and want to get the school into the spirit." Some of the girls confessed to me that trying out was not as they expected. Margo Placencia said, "It was harder than I thought it would be. It takes a lot of time and work."

Remembering Oklahoma

By Stacie Olson

You went to work that day expecting to go home to your families at the end of the day, but most of you were killed. What was the bomber trying to do? And what was he thinking of?

You went to work that day, and some of you had made promises to keep with your families, but you never kept them. Some whole families were destroyed. You were just in the wrong place at the wrong time.

You went to work that day, and the whole world crumbled around you. All around you people were being crushed. Some lived and some died. Actually, most of you died. Both alive and dead were removed from the building. Some later died at local hospitals.

You went to work that day trying to think of a way to change peoples' lives forever for the best. But in your hearts you knew you couldn't change everyone's lives. But you tried. You died in your efforts, and now you are known around the world as heroes.

TASK testing shows RC improvement

By Rishi Sharma
Staff Writer

It was that time of year again. Testing. That dreaded word that every student wishes they didn't have to hear. Well, on Tuesday and Thursday of last week, every freshman and sophomore at River City was supposed to take the TASK test.

The TASK test is a standardized test given by the district to all freshmen and sophomores so they can find out approximately how RC students compare to other students in the state.

Students are rated on their approximate grade level equivalency in a certain subject. A student can be ranked anywhere from first grade, a one, to a freshman in college, a 13. In the past, River City's scores have been some of the lowest in the state. However, in recent years scores have been rising. 1994-95 test scores showed that there was some improvement in both reading and mathematics. According to the 1994-95 test scores, the average freshman and the average sophomore were at grade level in mathematics.

RC students are improving, and the hope is that we will continue to improve until River City is one of the top schools in the state.

Open House is tonight . Bring your parents and the parent survey, help get spirit points for your class, and increase Raider pride.

No different from the rest of us

Here on RC campus there are some really special students. Some of the most special ones are the students in Ms. Garcia's class. These are students with severe mental and/or physical handicaps, such as Down syndrome or cerebral palsy.

The only difference these students have is a learning challenge. Otherwise they are part of a high school society. Their friendship is honest and sincere. "If they like you they will hug you and shake your hand," said Ms. Garcia.

The students really are social. They tell jokes, laugh and have a good time. When you see these students exploring the campus or maintaining it, stop by and say hi! You will notice how nice and respectful they are. The special needs students' most common theme is, "We are happy with what we are, instead of what we aren't."

> "We are happy with what we are, instead of what we aren't."
> -Special Needs class theme

Having these students at our high school is really a source of great pride for all. For them, they feel as if they fit. When special needs students come to school they feel very independent. Erik Macias, a special needs student, said, "Its nice coming to high school. I like going to classes and I would like to be an electrician."

You might be asking, "Why are they in a different class if they are the same as all students?" Well, its just like a varsity team that has its own place to practice.

Shadow day a success

Me and my shadow, traveling through RC's campus, chatting, laughing, giggling, hoping this day will never end. This is a very special day called Shadow Day that happens twice a year.

Shadow Day is when Ms. Garcia's students get to accompany Leadership students through all the day. Ms. Garcia's students are severely handicapped, but that doesn't stop them from having fun. They get to meet other students and experience an unusual day.

For developmentally disabled (DD) students this is very exciting, especially having lunch with a crowd of new friends. They really like this idea because they have fun being involved with other students around school.

"I see how happy they are, even with their disability," said Alyssa Murphy, a Leadership participant in Shadow Day .

Leadership students also have a wonderful experience. Ms. Johnson said, "They fight over Ms. Garcia's students." Leadership students learn to be more aware of prejudice against the handicapped. They become more open to people around them. "All we have are positive responses," concluded Ms. Johnson. Senior Shafak Pervez and junior Sheeza Ashraf, Commissioners for Shadow Day said,"It shows that we do care."

The severely disabled students who participated in Shadow Day were Jessica Viramontes, Katie Goeden, Bouafiane Phanthavong, Erik Macias, Nga Nguyen, Susan Christian, Bobbie DeShields, Sarah Sorbello, Rashika Ram and Maribel Salas.

"They really like to please and they teach the staff, too. They always try. [These students say] `More homework, please,'" said Ms. Garcia.

Future surgeons feel faint

Physiology pig dissection a scream

By Fouzia Fazel
Staff Writer

Last week, physiology students got a rare opportunity to dissect fetal pigs. These pigs were taken from the mother's womb when she was killed for "human need." Many students were excited when they heard of the dissection several months ago. "I was looking forward to dissect the pig," said Malalai Yusufzai.

When the day finally arrived, however, the students weren't so sure if they wanted to do this.

"There are dead little pigs over there," they screeched, horrified.

"It stinks," several students yelled.

"I feel like throwing up," said Kammy Ujagar.

"Yuck! I'm eating lunch afterwards," complained Lesya Ganaga.

Yet, some students couldn't wait to get their hands on the pig.

"It is very interesting to see how this pig relates to our body," stated Margo Placencia.

On the first day, these lucky students cut the ventral part of the pig and looked at the muscles. The next day they cut deeper and looked at the lungs, the intestines and the stomach. The third day they observed the aorta and the heart. Of course, as each of these organs was observed, they were also removed. "If you want to see a heart cut out perfectly, come to this table!" announced Mrs. Jain. By the time she yelled out the same phrase about the brain, the pig's head was already removed and separated from the body. By the end of the week, not much was left from the poor little pigs.

"It is so interesting to see how the students' reactions never change from year to year," said Mrs. Jain. "Some are so excited and some are staying as far away as possible," she observed.

No doubt none of these students will forget this little experience. And one thing is for sure: there are some mighty fine surgeons at our school.

Pre-lunchtime fun in dissection

By Jessica Honsinger
Staff Writer

WARNING! DO NOT READ THIS DIRECTLY BEFORE, DURING, OR RIGHT AFTER EATING ANY MEAL OR SNACK! DOING SO MAY BE HAZARDOUS TO YOUR HEALTH!!!!!!

I have a warped mind. Anyone who knows me can tell you that. One of the things that my mind enjoys is slicing open the body of some poor dead animal and picking at its innards in a science class. That's probably why all year I've been looking forward to the dissection of a fetal pig in Physiology. Yummy, especially since I have Physiology right before lunch. When Ms. Jain said that we were going to dissect the fetal pig two weeks after returning from spring break, I was thrilled. Of course, that would soon change.

We recieved our baby piggies on Monday. Ms. Jain assured us that they came from slaughterhouses when pregnant females are turned into Spam. I was so hyped up. I wanted to scalpel it! HE HE HE HE HE! (Sorry, the voices get to me at times.) Then it happened. We got our pigs. The only thing I could think of when I saw it was, "OMIGOD! THEY WANT ME TO CUT UP BABE!"

It's cute little piggie nose was all wrinkled and eyes were shut. All I could think of was the scene in Charlotte's Web. You know, at the very beginning when the dad wants to kill Wilbur but Fern wouldn't let him? You have read the book, haven't you? Please say yes! Anyway, the daughter wouldn't let her father kill the runt of the litter. It's a really sweet scene. I wanted to be Fern. I didn't want to cut up that poor defenseless little piggie. Poor piggie!

My mind was in a state of sheer confusion. I wanted to get a good grade in Physiology, but it was a baby pig!

That first day was the worst. Poor piggie! I could only watch as my lab partners examined the limp body with glee. The muscles were an odd creamy-yellow color, like hardened bacon grease. The pepperoni pizza that I was planning to have at lunch suddenly sounded very unappetizing. All I could do was look away as Bethany poked and prodded at the pig and Khonthavy sketched the progress. Thank goodness they're understanding!

The next day, I was much better. After the initial shock from the preservative smell, I was ready to cut. It really wasn't so bad! All that you have to do is detach yourself from the pig. (And if you get too attached to a dead piggie corpse, you need serious help!) Another thing that helped was the fact that I couldn't see the eyes. Without the eyes, you could almost forget that the pig was at one time an almost living, breathing creature. So the week went on. And so did I. The pig was dissected, named (George, the female pig), and lived a life of science. The experience was... interesting, to say the least. But if I ever have to do that again...

Renaissance members get bugged

Gregor goes to the fair

By Carolina Avina
Staff Writer

Recycle, reuse, reduce is what Renaissance had in mind this week when they participated in the annual Plastic Petting Zoo at the California Conservation Fair.

The California Conservation Fair in Sacramento is an annual celebration held on Earth Day, April 22, to teach the community about the importance of the environment and recycling.

There were many fun and educational things for people to do like visiting stage shows or booths with hands-on activities and playing recycling games.

This is Renaissance's third year of joining the fair. Ms. Mihanovich said, "My students enjoy attending. They get to meet people from all over the Sacramento area and the San Francisco area."

Ms. Askew-Pederson, who helped in the creation of the Renaissance entry for the Plastic Petting Zoo, said, "The fair, aside from it being really entertaining and lots of fun, gives the students an inspiration for recycling."

The Plastic Petting Zoo is a contest in which participants must create a creature out of only recyclable materials like aluminum, paper, yard clippings, water-based paint, and plastic bottles.

This year's entry from Renaissance was Gregor, a cockroach named after a character in Franz Kafka's story, "The Metamorphosis." Mrs. Green explained that they picked a cockroach because, "it's an original idea and, besides, cockroaches are scavengers and go along with the idea of conservation."

Gregor was made out of all recyclable items. Its body was cut out of two-liter soda bottles and tennis ball containers. Wire was transformed into internal organs and intestines, and the bottoms of the soda bottles served for the mouth and eyes.

Renaissance will compete with many Valley schools. Results were not in as of this writing.

May 9: UC Davis hosts debate on heated topic of affirmative action

From UC Davis

Debates about affirmative action touch on core beliefs about discrimination, privilege, history -- and hopes for the future of our communities, country and children.

In this time of controversy about affirmative action at UC Davis, University Extension and the School of Law present "Affirmative Action: Beyond the Debate," on May 9, 8:30 a.m. to 4:15 p.m. at the California State Capitol in room 4202. This conference provides a forum for presentation of many perspectives, where experts can discuss openly the issues, values, and future of principles and practices associated with affirmative action and other approaches to ending discrimination.

"The goal of the conference is to create a forum of balanced discussion that reflects the multi-dimensional aspects of the affirmative action issue," said Martha West, conference moderator and professor of law at UC Davis. "The dialogue about affirmative action affects education, employment, business and public contracting. We have invited speakers to address concerns in each of these areas."

Conference speakers and panelists include attorneys, business professionals, academics and journalists who are involved in challenging, supporting, practicing or evaluating affirmative action. Richard Rodriguez, a journalist, commentator and author of the books, "Hunger of Memory" and "Days of Obligation," presents the keynote address.

Martha West begins the conference with a historical overview of affirmative action. Following her are presentations and panels on the public's understanding of affirmative action, issues related to discrimination and equal opportunity in employment, contracting and education. The pros and cons of the California Civil Rights Initiative completes the agenda.

Question and answer sessions throughout the day provide opportunities for participants to ask questions about issues that concern them.

University Extension is the continuing and professional education branch of the University of California. University Extension offers public policy conferences to bring social issues to the attention of the public, media and policymakers through thoughtful, balanced discussion.

The conference fee is $55 and includes conference materials. For more information or to enroll, please call toll free at (800) 752-0881. From Davis, Dixon or Woodland, please all 757-8777.

Caller ID:

Your phone & your privacy

From Univ. of San Diego Center for Public Interest Law

The Privacy Rights Clearinghouse joins a statewide campaign to spread the word about the privacy impacts of Caller ID. It is one of 43 consumer-related organizations to receive grant funds from Pacific Bell and GTE as part of the massive consumer awareness campaign required by the California Public Utilities Commission.

"Telephone privacy is precious to many Californians," said Beth Givens, director of the Privacy Rights Clearinghouse. "Half of the households in the state have unlisted numbers, the highest percentage of any state."

Starting June 1, telephone numbers will be transmitted when you make phone calls. Those who subscribe to the Caller ID service and who purchase a special display device will be able to see and capture the calling party's number. Phone users who do not want their number to be released can take advantage of blocking options, offered free. The purpose of the consumer education campaign is to alert consumers to those blocking options -- Complete or Selective Blocking.

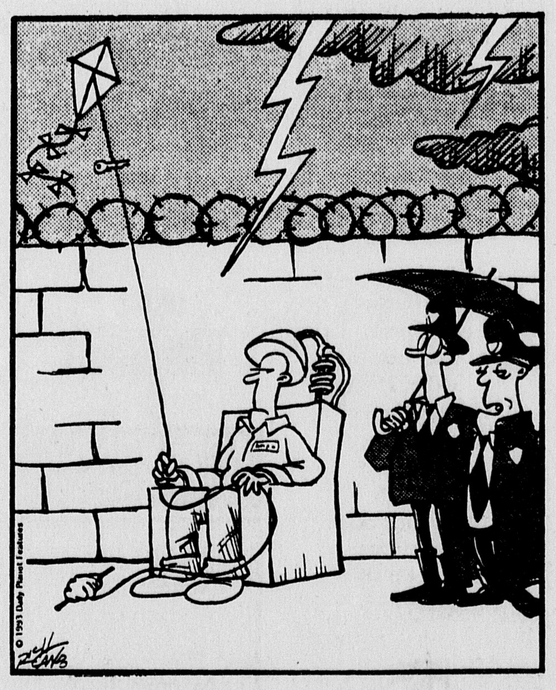
"Our job, and that of the other grantees, is to reach people who might not be aware of the announcements on TV, the radio and newspapers," said Givens. "The Clearinghouse is especially concerned about those who are at risk from the release of their phone number -- victims of domestic violence and stalking, and the shelters which serve them; people who want to remain anonymous when calling hotlines for AIDS counseling, suicide-prevention, and the like; and people in professions like law enforcement, mental health counseling, and teachers who need to shield their phone numbers when calling clients from home."

The Clearinghouse offers a free 8-page guide called "Caller ID and My Privacy." Consumers can call (800) 773-7748 (California only) to order. The guide provides an in-depth discussion of the many privacy implications of Caller ID. IT is available in English, Spanish, Chinese, Vietnamese and Korean.

The Privacy Rights Clearinghouse is a grant-funded program administered by the University of San Diego Center for Public Interest Law.

In operation for over 3 years, it has received over 33,000 calls form California consumers. It offers 19 free guides on a variety of consumer privacy issues, including privacy in cyberspace, telemarketing, credit reporting, government records, workplace privacy and medical records.

CHAOS by BRIAN SHUSTER



"Darn these cutbacks!"

companies' decision to abandon their plans.

"We don't have anything else pending," he said. "It's unfortunate that a billion dollar plant trying to locate in the state of California can't happen."

He added that the state and the Environmental Protection Agency had become concerned about pollutants from the plant, which were "minute" when compared to the overall benefits of the project, such as saving trees and preserving landfill space.

He praised, however, efforts by the city of West Sacramento, the county of Yolo and other regional agencies who worked with the project to bring it close to fruition.

While disappointed in losing the paper recycling plant as an anchor business, Ramos is encouraged by other developments which may help jumpstart the industrial park.

"We're going to get a bridge, and that bridge is going to open up Southport," he commented.

The construction of the Daniel C. Palamidessi Bridge has just been put out to bid, and the project is planned to be funded by a partnership between the city, the Port of Sacramento, and several development projects including the Southport Industrial Park.

Steve Patek, West Sacramento's community development director, said his staff was "disappointed" at the announcement that the paper plant would not happen.

"We put in a lot of hard work and effort, but certainly understand what the (paper) markets have been doing lately, and some of the long-term trends in those markets," said Patek.

Stubbs, representing MacMillan Bloedel, said his company has spent three to four million dollars pursuing local permits, and hopes to sell those permits and entitlements to another industrial user with similar needs. The company has a transferrable development agreement, conditional use permit and air pollution permit.
